TIP #15 Learn from Bambi

In Bambi, Bambi learns how life is full of changes. Bambi must learn to adapt to change in order to survive. Children must also learn to adapt & grow as life brings new changes & challenges.

Change happens all around us, all of the time. For kids, change can be a source of stress, unease & discomfort. Weather changes. The seasons change. Relationships change. Appearances change. Goals change. Lifestyles change. Parents must foster confidence in their children through genuine learning opportunities & opportunities to demonstrate what they learn. Kids must be empowered to develop the self-confidence to realize that they can survive life's changes.

Kids can be taught that change is inevitable; change can bring about new beginnings & often reflects necessary phases for life to go on. Autumn is a wonderful time full of such changes. The changes can seem odd, but they are necessary. Many animals gain extra weight & fur for winter hibernation making them look bigger or scarier. Without these changes, many would not survive the winter. Leaves change their colors & fall to the ground leaving trees bare & lifeless looking. However, without this necessary change, trees would not have enough stored nutrients to survive the winter. With autumn changes, it may seem like the world around us becomes something foreign, unfamiliar & even scary, but this is necessary change.

Bambi learned that nature is a powerful teacher which fosters curiosity that can build confidence. Talk about changes in nature during this time of year. How do the changes feel? How do they smell? What changes does your child see? What changes does your child hear? What changes in food availability can be tasted: pumpkins? Apple cider? Pecan pie? Help your child to appreciate the excitement that change can bring. You can also talk about how change is often cyclical. The trees may lose their leaves today but come springtime, they will be alive with color again.
