

FLAG DAY

Summer School Day 1

Today is June 14th. It is the first day of summer school. Jayley is sad that she can't spend the beginning of summer relaxing like her friends. She is in summer school to refresh her reading skills, per request of her parents.

As she walks into class, there are a ton of mini-United States flags. Jayley is wondering why there are so many flags. "It isn't Fourth of July yet," she thought to herself. She grabs a seat, and her summer school teacher begins to speak.

"Happy Flag Day," Mr. Martin said. "Hundreds of years ago we adopted our nation's flag. The first flag had thirteen stripes and thirteen stars for the thirteen colonies. The original thirteen colonies are North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, and Georgia. The flag has changed over time because our country developed into states." Jayley now understands why the flags are all over the classroom.

Summer School Day 2

On the second day of summer school, Jayley's teacher wants the students to recreate the original flag of America by drawing it. Then, recreate the present flag. Her teacher first wants the students to read a passage about the first flag of the United States and then draw both flags.

When Jayley is done reading, she uses the internet to recreate the old flag since she doesn't really know what it looks like. It takes her about thirty minutes to draw the original flag that was adopted on June 14th, 1777. Jayley did not need the internet for the current flag since she sees it everyday during the flag salute. An hour later Jayley is done drawing both flags. Summer school is off to a good start.
